

How healthcare professionals can prevent and manage postpartum depression?

1. Medical and Psychological Support

- Routine Screening:

Healthcare providers should conduct regular mental health screenings during prenatal and postnatal visits to identify early signs of postpartum depression.

- Accessible Counseling:

Offering psychological counseling and therapy sessions can help mothers cope with emotional challenges.

- Medication Management

In severe cases, doctors can prescribe safe antidepressants, ensuring they do not interfere with breastfeeding.

2. Community and Family Engagement

- Educating Families:

Healthcare professionals can educate family members about postpartum depression, helping them provide emotional and practical support.

- Support Groups:

Hospitals and clinics can facilitate peer support groups where mothers share experiences and coping strategies.
